

Top Ten Reasons to use Email in Your Classroom

- 1 Email makes communication easy!
Assigning homework, receiving completed assignments and setting up parent conferences can be done with the click of a mouse
- 2 Get students excited about writing!
Students are motivated by the social experience of exchanging emails with pen pals and classroom peers.
- 3 Go green!
Email helps use less paper, which is not only a cost-saver for your school's budget, but also protects planet Earth
- 4 Give students the skills they need for tomorrow.
When students practice using email in the classroom, they are learning essential workplace skills.
- 5 Embed writing in all class subjects.
When using email to communicate, students integrate writing in all classes, even math and science.
- 6 Engage parents in classroom activities.
Email allows you to communicate easily with parents about class activities and increase their involvement in the classroom.
- 7 Provide authentic writing opportunities.
Unlike worksheets and drills, writing to peers with email creates authentic learning experiences, providing deeper learning and encouraging higher order thinking skills.
- 8 Improve standardized test scores.
When email is a regular part of the classroom, students write more and score better on standardized tests.
- 9 Safely bring the world into your classroom!
With SchoolMail's robust security features, students are able to safely connect and collaborate with students from around the globe.
- 10 Remove language barriers!
SchoolMail's integrated, instant translation feature allows easier communication between those who speak different languages.
